

Current Resource Library

Lesson Plans

Inquiry-based educational experiences using congressional investigations and civics concepts

Snapshots

A high-level look at historic investigations with questions, audio, and Spanish-language materials included

Videos

Made in partnership with Detroit PBS, these provide visual support to lesson plans in the classroom

Oversight Simulation

Our signature 4-day lesson where students participate in a simulation of a state-level oversight investigation about a policy issue in Michigan

Professional Development

Marquette Alger RESA invites secondary educators to participate in an in-depth professional development session designed to enhance social studies instruction through high-quality resources and proven instructional strategies. Offered in collaboration with the Levin Center for Oversight and Democracy at Wayne State University Law School, this training will feature resources from the center's Learning by Hearings program, supporting the development of inquiry-driven, civically engaged, and literacy-rich classrooms. Educators will leave with access to research-backed resources and practical tools to deepen student understanding, encourage critical thinking, and cultivate active, informed citizenship. Participants will also engage with standards-aligned materials and explore collaborative strategies to implement these approaches effectively in their own classrooms.

Thursday, February 12 from 9:00am - 2:00pm
